

What happens if I do not vote?

Apparent Failure to Vote Notice

We will send you a letter called an Apparent Failure to Vote Notice.

This is a letter saying we think you did not vote.

If you get this letter you must write back.

You can ask someone you trust to help you.

If you did vote

tick the option that says you did

and write about when and where you voted or posted your vote

or

if you did not vote

tick the option that says you did not vote

and write about why you did not vote.

If at the time of the election you:

- didn't have a place to live

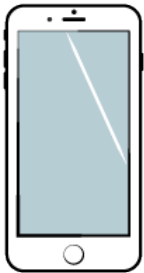

- were in prison, or

- were experiencing serious mental illness

talk to your support worker or phone the Victorian Electoral Commission on 1300 551 575.

Return your letter to the VEC

you can email us your letter

or

post the letter back to us

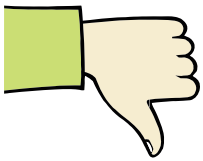

you do not need a stamp.

Infringement Notice (a fine)

If you do not answer the first letter

or

you do not give us a good reason for why you did not vote

we may send you another letter called an Infringement Notice.

This is a fine for not voting in an election.
